Shareholder Yield: A more comprehensive form of shareholder return

Epoch believes the growth and applications of free cash flow represent among the best predictors of long-term shareholder return, and that companies can maximize returns through disciplined capital allocation.

- A company should reinvest capital if the expected return on invested capital is greater than the company's cost of capital
- Remaining free cash flow should be returned to shareholders via shareholder yield

Important Information

Past performance is no guarantee of future results, which will vary.

1. Returns are presented "pure" gross and net of management fees and include the reinvestment of all income. "Pure" gross returns, presented as supplemental information, do not reflect the deduction of any trading costs, fees and expenses and are presented for comparison purposes only. Net performance reflects the "pure" gross-of-fees return reduced by the highest annual fee, calculated on a monthly basis. Portfolio performance returns are based upon trade date accounting and include the reinvestment of all interest, dividends and all realized and unrealized gains and losses. Portfolio performance is presented net of non-reclaimable withholding taxes. Portfolios are valued daily. Multi-horizon rates of return (monthly, quarterly, annual, and annualized periods) are calculated by geometrically linking daily rates of return. Returns are annualized for periods greater than 1 year. Periods less than 1 year are cumulative, unless otherwise noted.
